[redacted] for CORONA. I did not show the letter or any other document to Mr. Macy. Mr. Macy noted the substance of [redacted] briefing as well as the statements I made with regard to Mr. Johnson's letter to Dr. Killian. He said he now understood and believed he could explain it to the satisfaction of Mr. Stans. He added that with the national deficit expected, every budget item will receive very close scrutiny, particularly those difficult to explain either from a security viewpoint or for any other reason.

3. Mr. Macy then reviewed his knowledge of the CHALICE program and stated that he had been of the opinion that the Agency's efforts would terminate and the Department of Defense assume this function. He was advised by [redacted] that the history of the project had been a direct reflection of the capability of our equipment to survive. The project has lived from a 6-month to 6-month period, and the present estimate is that our equipment will be useful until about 1 January 1960. Mr. Macy took note of this fact.

Defense and all concerned felt that overflights should be made in the manner now used and by our organization.

5. I further briefed Mr. Macy on our emergency war plans proposals and understanding with SAC. Further, that in the event of war, SAC would be inheriting fine equipment and highly skilled people, thus greatly enhancing the immediate capability for either additional reconnaissance or for bomb damage assessment. All of this seemed to make sense to Mr. Macy. He said that he believed he had sufficient information for his purpose but that he would appreciate a paper outlining CHALICE past, present and future plans. I told him that we would furnish him such a paper, and I have asked the staff to work on this.
